ALL AMERICANS ORDERED OUT OF CHINA

NATIONALISM IS BOILING REAL YELLOW PERIL EXISTS

All Foreigners Are Hurrying To Points of Safety For Debarcation—Lives In Danger, Situation Now Worse Than Before the Historical Boxer Rebellion—Hundreds Already Are Safe Aboard Ships—This City Has Several People In the Danger Zone.

The state department Friday ordered exodus of all Americans from interior China to ports from which they may be transported out of the country.

Merchant vessels are to be commandeered for the purpose, it was learned.

At the same time 400 American marines stationed at Guam, in the Pacific, were ordered to the Philippines. They depart abroad the American steamer Goldstar.

The sailing of the Goldstar was reported to the navy department by Admiral C. S. Williams, commanded in chief of the American Asiatic fleet.

Altho her destination is Cavite, in the Philippines, the navy department expects her to stop there only long enough to take on supplies and proceed to Shanghai.

Admiral Williams reported the most alarming conditions. He transmitted a message from Rear Admiral H. H. Hough, commander of the American Yangtse patrol in which he said panic stricken American and British refugees are pouring into river towns in their efforts to leave as quickly as possible.

At Chungking, 85 British and 25 Americans have concentrated from the interior. They sent word to those they left behind to leave as quickly as possible, Rear Admiral Hough said.

The evacuation is attended with the greatest risk, it was said, and grave fears are expressed that all of the Americans will not escape the fury of the encircling Chinese armies, who have adopted the battle cry of "Death to all foreigners."

Arms and ammunition are being rushed from the Philippines to the handful of American troops, who will have to fight their way thru hundreds of thousands of Chinese troops equally as well or better equipped.

From the towns up the Yangtse river American destroyers are bringing into Shanghai such refugees as can reach the river.

With thousands of other foreigners trying to leave, the situation was said to be even more serious than the Boxer rebellion.

It was explained that the naval forces of the world powers were able to subdue the Chinese hordes at that time. Today military and naval experts say that anything but temporary resistance is impossible and the decision has been reached that all white people must leave China.

Only by the promptest action, attended with the best of luck, can Americans hope to escape, officials declared.

President Coolidge Friday promised every possible protection. Warships of all the powers with interest in China are steaming for the ports. The remainder of the American fleet at

FUNERAL OF MRS. JAMES.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ellen James were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Geedey, near Orient.

Burial was in the Pleasant township cemetery near Mt. Sterling.

The trouble with a great many men is that they don't appreciate their predicament until they get into the quicksand.

Manila is under orders to proceed to Shanghai and expected to get under way during the night.

On the ability of these troops to keep the railroad open depends the safety of the large American colony in Peking and the hundreds of Americans from other places who are making their way to Peking for concentration.

It was cited significantly that the troops were unable to keep the line open when the revolution of China was started one year ago and are doing so now because there is no large concentration of Chinese troops in that vicinity.

But against the handful of men China has an army of 1,200,000 well equipped and trained troops in the field, a reserve of 4,000,000 who have seen military service and 15,000,000 more men available for military service. They are equipped with machine guns, field artillery, airplanes, bombs and the most modern weapons of war of all kinds. They are well officered and well trained.

A photograph received at the war department at Washington Friday showed a field headquarters in China. In front of the commandant's tent was a modern wireless for communicating with other units. It is a much better equipment than anything in the American army, officials said.

ANNA'S WELL AGAIN

This is the latest photograph of Anna Fitzgibbon, grand opera star, made at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ernest Graham of Chicago, where she has been recovering from the dire results of too strenuous reducing. "I am perfectly well again," she said, "but I shall never forget the agony I went through to get thin and the consequences of my foolish vanity."

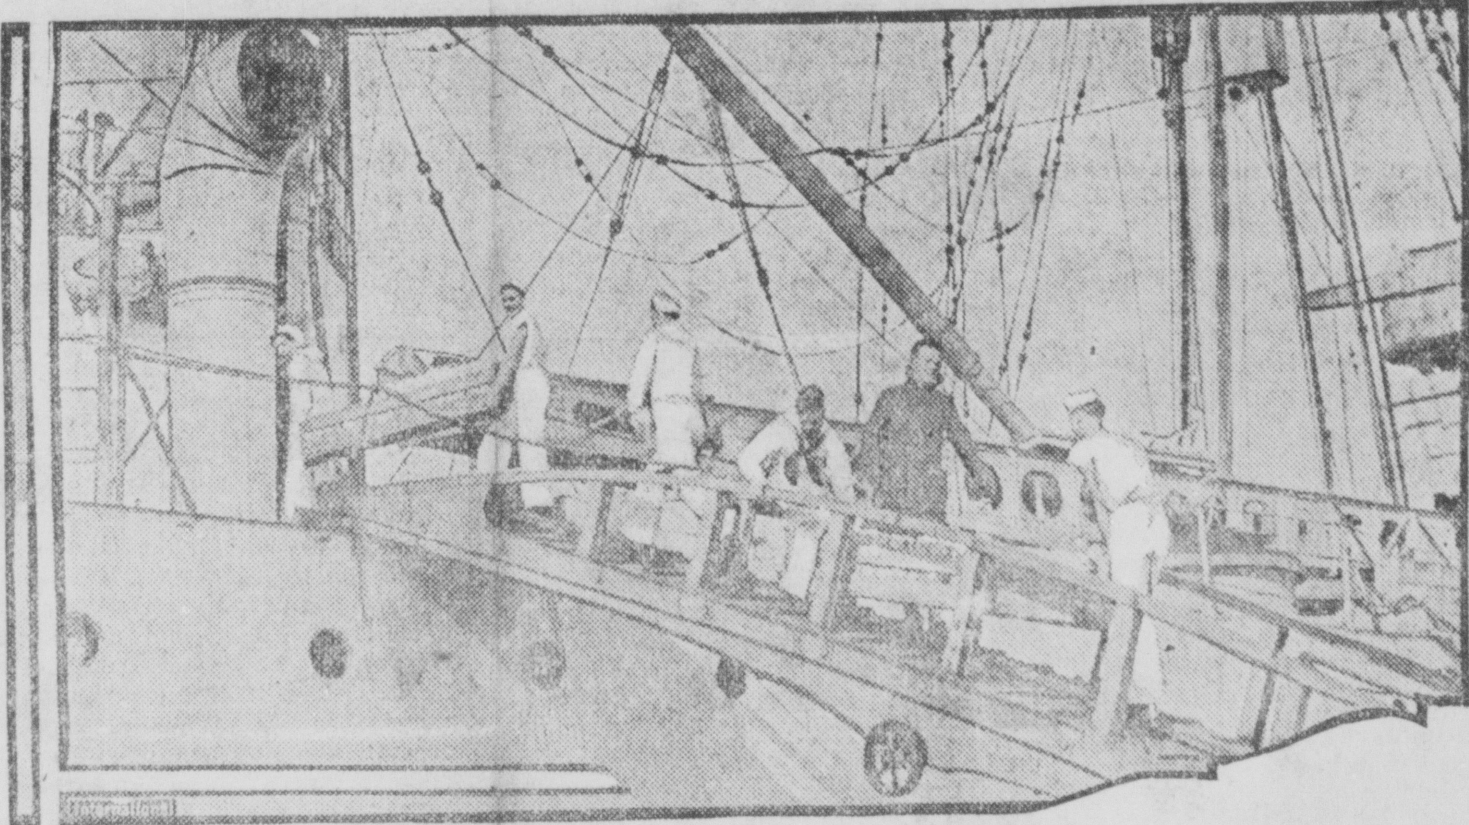

Anatomy of Hindu Lad Seems to Be All Wrong

Bombay.—Medical science is baffled by the strange case of a Hindu lad of thirteen who has just been admitted to the Osmania general hospital at Hyderabad, suffering from a knee joint complaint.

Outwardly nothing is wrong with the boy, but during a routine examination it was discovered that the organs of his chest are completely transposed, the liver being on the left side, heart on the right side, spleen opposite its normal position, while his stomach is in an inverse direction. His intestines lay coiled in the opposite direction.

The boy is healthy, and the phenomena is believed to have been due to twisting during the early weeks of his embryonic life.

Sand Heralds Knell of Artificial Lighting

Darrington, Wash.—Here's a mighty interesting incident. If true, vouched for by George Van Cleve which heralds the knell of artificial lighting. Recently Van Cleve plastered his basement, using material from a sand vein found near here. At all times the walls radiate light, the sand possessing radioactive properties. Samples of the sand vein are being analyzed by the geologists at the state university.

Here Are New Words, Take 'Em or Leave 'Em

London.—Mayfair has developed two new slang words which are now being worked overtime.

"Marabout" is one and it is used to describe anything old-fashioned or dowdy. It is a very elastic word, however, and at the Kilt Cat club it was heard applied to everything from one's enemies to a drink of which someone did not approve. It is a noun.

The other word is a synonym of "marabout" and is used both as a noun and an adjective. It is "cagmag," a variation is "cagmaggy."

Government Railroad

Reports $1,116,000 Loss

Washington.—While the railroads throughout the United States are enjoying their greatest period of prosperity, the only government-owned line—the Alaskan railroad—sustained a loss of $1,116,000 for the year, its general manager reported to the secretary of the Interior recently.

Revenues of the road increased by $206,274 during the year, while operating expenses were cut $208,000.

Plans for the completion of the road and purchase of modern equipment call for an expenditure of approximately $12,000,000 during the next few years.

Speaking of twentieth century efficiency every married man knows that the automobile has made it possible for women to do three times as much shopping as was humanly possible in the old days.

OHIO WEATHER IN PAST YEAR BROKE RECORD

Crop Growing Season Was Quite a Good Deal Longer Than the Average.

Ohio weather during 1926 broke no records, according to the report given out by W. H. Alexander, meteorologist Columbus, Ohio.

"The first half of the year was generally dry and cool; the latter half, a little warmer and persistently wet, especially from July to October, inclusive. March and April were notably cold; only twice in the last forty-four years has the average for these months dropped so low. A remarkable feature in March was the very low temperature over limited areas.

"The lowest temperature during the year was 22 below at McArthur, January 29; the highest 103 degrees at Lancaster July 21. The range for the year, was, therefore, 125 degrees.

"September was the wettest September since 1866, the average rainfall for the state being 7.28 inches, or 4.40 inches above normal for the month. The September rainfall in 1866 was 9.67 inches.

For the state as a whole, the average number of days with rain during the year was 145. The percentage of sunshine was unusually small.

"The snowfall for the first four months was above the average, for the last three months below normal.

"The last killing frost of spring at most stations in the state was May 4, the first killing frost in the autumn on or near October 26. A few stations recorded killing frost earlier.

"The crop-growing season, therefore, covered about 175 days, an appreciably longer period than the average. Frequently rains during the harvest season made the saving of crops very difficult."

The highest temperature at the Experiment Station at Wooster, according to Observer C. A. Patton's report, was 99 degrees on July 21; the lowest 11 degrees January 29. The total rainfall at the station in September was 8.51 inches, for the year it was 39.35 inches or one-fourth inch above the thirty-eight year average. The total snowfall was 50 inches.

HIGH WATERS BLOCK CARS ON TRACTION

The rains of the past twenty-four hours have broken the schedule of regular trains on the traction line so much so, that the parlor car has been taken off temporarily and all are running from thirty to forty minutes late. The trouble was caused at Bell's Siding, where water has collected to such a depth that cars cannot run thru and all passengers have to be transferred.

The Chesapeake & Hocking railroad contractor did not move the earth far enough away from the right-of-way of the Traction company and the heavy rains have washed the mud down, which choked the sewer pipes. This caused the surface water to collect at this point, making it dangerous for cars to pass thru.

The river road west of this city, which has been covered with water from two to three feet deep for the past two days is now passable, as the water is only a foot deep and traffic has been resumed. Hargus creek was out of banks during the night, but is now running only bank full. The Columbus pike south of Waverly, is impassable and dangerous.

Nothing could be worse than sitting on top of the world all by yourself.

The Average Meal Served in State Hospitals Costs Only Six Cents, Recent Survey Shows

Editor's Note—This is the ninth of a series of articles that will appear each week in this newspaper dealing with Ohio's problem of increasing insanity. These articles are sponsored by the Ohio Association for the Welfare of the Mentally Sick, which has but one objective, namely, more scientific and more humane treatment of mentally sick patients in state hospitals and the rapid rehabilitation of these unfortunates.

The Ohio Association for the Welfare of the Mentally Sick has carefully investigated all phases of the treatment accorded the average patient in many institutions for the care of the mentally sick and has come to some very definite conclusions.

In the first place this association has discovered that there are two distinct ways of looking at this problem. First, that the hospitals should be conducted as asylums, copied after our county poor farms with very little if any attempt to give the patients any physical attention; and second, that the hospitals should be modern in every particular, giving each patient the benefit of every improved scientific treatment that might tend to restore mental health to normal or as nearly so as possible.

THE PRESENT METHOD.

A description of the present day methods of treatment in the average hospital for the insane will be a description of the treatment advised by the older school of thought. It represents merely asylum methods. The treatment given is conspicuous by its absence. For the mentally disturbed patient the lodge or cell is provided. A lodge or cell is a room with a wooden floor, cement covered walls and a high ceiling with a light therein; the iron-barred window is further reinforced by a heavy wooden shutter that is pierced in many places with gimlet holes to admit air. There is no furniture, no bed, merely a straw mattress thrown in one corner. The disturbed patient is shoved into this room clothed only in a "straw" suit. His food is shoveled into him in a heavy tin container. He is left for hours at a time to his own devices, what he is screaming at imaginary voices, singing rude songs, cutting into the cement wall with his finger nails, making of inartistic pictures on the wall or tearing up his clothing or straw tick. The average asylum has from ten to thirty of such lodges and they are usually filled. Occasionally the patients are handcuffed before being placed in the lodge, especially if more than one occupies the same lodge.

OPiates ARE GIVEN.

After a time the patient either begins to improve so that he can be taken out of the lodge or dies of exhaustion. Opiates are often given in fairly large doses but seem to have but little effect. If the patient improves he is permitted out on the day hall, his clothes are restored to him and he is permitted to eat with other patients in the main dining room.

If he continues to improve and recovers sufficient mentality as to be able to do things fairly well, he is given a job on the farm or in a labor detail and continues on in this employment until another disturbed period occurs when the lodge treatment is repeated.

The food is invariably poor in quality and quantity. A survey of nine states shows that the average meal costs the state six and two-thirds cents. It takes no great stretch of imagination for the average housewife to appreciate that delicacies can not be introduced into a diet that costs so little. This amount is thirteen and one-third cents less than that allowed a federal prisoner in the county jail.

HANDLING THE FOOD.

The manner in which the food is prepared and served is most unsatisfactory. It is usually clean when it leaves the main kitchen, but loses much of its heat before it reaches the distant dining rooms and is dished up and served on the tables. It is a case of "hot dog or die" at the average table. As one watches the various methods employed by the patients in eating, he sees the spoon, the fingers, a cup or even a plate turned to get the food into the mouth. There is but one attendant to look after from twenty-five to fifty patients while they are in the dining room. The gross sensibilities of many of the patients are so shocked by such practices that they can not eat. (To Be Continued Next Week)

VIOLIN SUITS CO-EDS' MOODS

The co-ed knows her own mind and usually can make her preferences known in no uncertain manner. When she joins the college band or orchestra—and a survey just completed by the Conn Music Center involving 160,497 college and university students shows that one-fifth of band and orchestra players were women—she knows what instrument she prefers for getting musical training, gaining prestige in college and helping to pay her school expenses.

New Kitchener Story

The surgeons of a big liner must gather a fund of stories about prominent people. Dr. J. C. H. Beaumont, senior surgeon of the Majestic, who has just written his reminiscences, relates that on one occasion Lord Kitchener, who was on board, was worrying the other passengers by his unsociability. Eventually a plot was arranged that the lady sitting opposite at dinner should wink at him. She did so. Nothing happened. He simply stared right through her and went on eating.

Women Prefer Good

Looks to Long Life

The advocates of the Steinach method of human rejuvenation by treatment of certain glands in the body stress the wrong feature in endeavoring to popularize the system, contends Hugh Fullerton in an article in Liberty. "To a lay investigator," Fullerton writes, after a careful study of the method and its results, "it appears that Doctor Steinach missed the big opportunity. If he had advertised the treatment as a beauty restorer, he would have converted most of the feminine sex by this time."

"I found the women who had taken the treatment," the writer explains, "not so much interested in life extension as they were in the fact that their hair had become glossier, their complexions improved, the pouches gone from under their eyes, the cheeks rounded, and their legs more shapely."

Gray Fox Trimming Adds to This Squirrel Coat

Marian Nixon, leading lady in motion pictures, wears a beautiful gray squirrel coat trimmed with gray fox on collar and cuffs. She also wears a periwinkle-blue velvet hat with embroidered crown, and carries a handsome bead bag.

Evening Gowns Are of Two Different Fabrics

Many of the new evening gowns are made of two different fabrics, observes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, usually of two different colors, as they are in a gown from Patou that forms the basis of a beautiful black and white ensemble. The slightly bloused-in-back waist of this gown is in a supple white velvet, and the skirt, draped with an up-in-front line, of black velvet with a startling flash of white where a fan plait of white velvet is set in at the front. Three stripes of two-inch crystal bead banding mark a deep U-shaped yoke on the bodice front and swings loose at the back to form a capelike outline.

Completing this distinctive ensemble is a coat of black velvet cut with a cape back and collared with ermine. A startling note is the use of ermine as lining, regal ermine usually meeting with a respectful consideration not accorded to linings. An ensemble of this type was made for the queen of Rumania.

Suede Calf Leggings for Blustery Weather

Suede calf leggings have been designed to be worn for outdoors on chilly winter days. The leggings are fashioned of deep-ple suede calf that is soft in texture and rich in appearance. It is, however, designed or marked in reptilian effects. Some of them are trimmed with edgings of another leather in the same or a contrasting color. Fancy buckles, rows of bone buttons or zipper-like fastenings make the choice easy and simple according to the individual idea regarding the manipulation of such articles of apparel. Another interesting feature of these leggings is the fact that they may be had in all the new fabric colors, including tan, brown, gray, green, blue and black.

Fur Trimmings on Coat Add Note of Distinction

Fur trimmings on coats are the rule rather than the exception this season, and the use of fur is marked by discretion and restraint. Even in instances where it is employed with a most lavish hand the effect is always distinguished and in perfect taste. On the other hand, for those who prefer to wear a separate neckpiece, there are any number of models devoid of fur. They attract attention by reason of their skillful cut and meticulous finish.

Use Coconut Oil Soap to Soften Hard Water

The hard water problem is one that is faced in many sections of the United States. In such cases it is almost impossible to get a cleansing suds with soaps that will work well in soft water. An easy way of overcoming the hard water difficulty is to use any soap made of 100 per cent coconut oil. The use of such a soap softens the water and produces a quick and generous suds, cleans thoroughly and rinses easily. Using coconut oil soap is better than depending upon unsanitary cisterns as a means of securing soft water.

Buckles Great and Small

Nowadays buckles great and small are all the rage in Paris. After choosing an expensive shoe in doeklin or kid at one of the fashionable "bootiers," the Parisienne next goes over to the special showcase to choose a buckle to match. In the cheaper boulevard stores, too, about 60 per cent of the models are decorated with a buckle.

Second Growth of Trees

The bureau of plant industry says that a second growth late in the season is a frequent occurrence with the cherry and the plum tree after a continuous dry spell. This second blooming may also indicate a diseased condition of the tree. If this has occurred only on one tree, it is indicative of a diseased condition, while if it is prevalent throughout the entire orchard, it is a result of weather conditions.

The New Home of The Cleveland News

CALLED MOST MODERN NEWSPAPER PLANT IN THE WORLD

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. — The new home of The Cleveland News, in Superior ave. at E. 18th st., open now for the inspection of the public, is generally conceded by experts throughout the country to be the most modern newspaper plant in the country.

How well the task of designing The News' building has been accomplished may be realized adequately only by personal study. Specially conceived installations are to be found in almost every department, and every piece of equipment, important or minor, is placed in precise accordance with a plan that makes a systematic whole of the entire newspaper process, from editorial rooms to the presses and the deliveries.

The layout of floors is for progression downward from copy to press, the composing, engraving and stereotype rooms being on the third floor with the press and delivery rooms on the ground, thus providing a steady course for all material. News matter is sent from the news room on the second floor to the composing room through compressed air tubes.

The composing, stereotype and press rooms have the light and air of all outdoors, for they have been built to obtain a true flood of daylight. Besides tall windows on both sides, skylights in the ceiling provide light from above. Every inch of both gigantic rooms has bright, natural light and perfect ventilation. Artificial light is not needed anywhere in the building except at night.

In the photographs are shown:

No. 1—The News' building, extending 127 feet on Superior ave., 281 feet on E. 18th st. and 127 feet on Rockwell ave. It is five stories high and contains approximately 31,000 square feet of floor space on each floor.

No. 2—A section of the sound-proof newsroom on the second floor, showing the line of reporters' desks in the foreground.

No. 3—A view of the pressroom showing the line of superspeed presses, 210 feet in length and said to be the second largest single line installation in the world. At each end is a visitors' gallery from which spectators may watch the giant presses turn out 200,000 complete newspapers, cut, folded and counted, each hour.

No. 3.—The News' auditorium with a seating capacity of 425 and equipped with two motion picture projection machines, a movie screen and stage paraphernalia. The auditorium will be given without charge to worthy organizations or individuals for any mode of entertainment in keeping with the standards of The News.

JUSTICE GALVIN

Threatened To Sue the City of Steubenville For Back Pay.

Steubenville, Jan. 20.—(UP.)—Justice James P. Galvin today threatened to sue the city for pay as mayor as an aftermath of the time when the government of Steubenville had three heads at one time.

After Mayor John S. H. Patton had been ousted it was discovered he had ordered Galvin to act as mayor. However, E. J. Sanders who became mayor when the furor was ended, collected the back pay.

The city council finally offered to give Galvin half pay but he refused and threatened suit.

Important to Eradicate Bots

Effective and Economical Treatment Outlined in Recent Bulletin.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Anyone who has had anything to do with horses is more or less familiar with botflies and the annoyance they cause. Until recently, however, when a species known as the nose fly, new to this country, began to spread over the North Central states, but little attention has been given to control of the pests. Investigations made a few years ago by the United States Department of Agriculture clearly point to a very effective and economical treatment for the control or even eradication of all three kinds of horse bots. The results of these studies are discussed in Farmers' Bulletin No. 1503-F, just issued.

Summer Annoyance Serious.

The annoyance of the flies during the summer when they are laying their eggs on the hairs of the horse is serious, especially that of the nose fly, which often makes the animals uncontrollable. Although the nose botfly is restricted to the North Central and the northern Rocky mountain states, it is gradually spreading, and steps should be taken to control it. The eggs of the botflies are taken into the digestive tract of the horse where they hatch into bots or maggots and become attached to the stomach and intestines. They require about a year for development before being passed on, during which time they not only interfere with digestion but may actually cause stoppage, resulting in death.

Certain repellents, such as a mixture of pine tar 3 1/4 ounces, kerosene 1 1/4 ounces, laundry soap 1 ounce, powdered resin 1 ounce, and hot water to make 14 ounces, have been found to some extent effective in keeping the flies away. A protective device to cover the throat and chin of the horse will aid in reducing the annoyance and egg laying on these parts when horses are at work. The device consists chiefly of a piece of canvas suspended under the jaws and extending from the throat latch to the bit rings.

Poison Kills Pests.

Devices and repellents to reduce fly annoyance do not necessarily reduce or control the number of bots. However, it has been found that internal treatment with carbon disulphide capsules, a poison which kills the bots or maggots in the digestive tract, is effective and satisfactory. When all horses, mules and colts in a community are treated systematically for two or three years to insure that no living bots drop to the ground, the number of botflies in the area will be greatly lessened. This treatment should be given in winter, after the flies have finished their egg laying. Suggestions for control or eradication of horse bots by community effort are outlined in this bulletin.

In certain sections where control work against horse bots has been in progress, many farmers declare that the number of cases of colic and other digestive disturbances has been greatly reduced, and that horses are kept in better flesh on the same feed than was possible before control work began.

A copy of the bulletin may be obtained, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Feeding Meat Animals Profitable Side Line

In several counties in New York state, especially those within a 50-mile radius of Buffalo, the feeding of western-raised lambs and steers during the winter is proving a profitable sideline. It has the big advantage of distributing labor more evenly throughout the year, uses up coarse roughage, and provides manure for farms which do not maintain a dairy.

It is a somewhat hazardous enterprise, however, subject to wide market fluctuations and to losses as a result of improper feeding, and even to occasional heavy losses from disease. Disease and parasites, according to the New York State College of Agriculture, are especially troublesome with respect to sheep.

The college has given some study to these problems and is prepared to offer practical advice to farmers this winter through farmer's institutes and other meetings held in each county under the auspices of local farm bureaus.

FARM NOTES

Change litter in the poultry house before it becomes damp and heavy.

It's a wise farm family that goes to the fairs for vocational as well as vacational benefits.

If winter seeding of sweet clover is practiced, unscarified seed should be used. Scarified seed will sprout and kill out before spring.

Numerous farmers make good money because they recognize a better farming method when they see it. And they put it into practice.

The number of barnmade and commercial smut-treating machines has multiplied several times over the number used a year ago. One manufacturer of machines reports the sale of more than 700 last summer in Kansas.

U. S. VETERANS BUREAU TO REDEEM LOANS ON BONUSES

American Legion Planning Co-Operation With Banks—Committee To Interview Applicants.

Columbus, Jan. 20.—Having received direct assurance from General Frank T. Hines, Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, that his department would redeem all loans made by banks on adjusted service certificates granted as World War Bonus, the American Legion of Ohio came to the front today with a plan of co-operation with banks whereby they hope to solve the problem of loans confronting Ohio veterans.

State Commander Herbert R. Mooney, after a conference with officials of the Ohio Bankers' Association wired the Veterans' Bureau relative to the loans and received the following reply from General Hines: "All loans made by banks in good faith and in accordance with the law will be redeemed by the U. S. Veterans' Bureau without question. More than sufficient appropriation has been made to redeem all loans so that no apprehension need be felt by anyone."

The state department has notified all Legion Posts and County Councils, where they exist, to appoint a committee of three veterans who will establish temporary headquarters for the purpose of interviewing the applicants for loans. The committee will investigate each applicant for identification and will report to the banks whether the person is deserving of a loan and in this way will be of assistance as a clearing house for the veterans and the banks. The plan has already been put in effect in some of the larger cities and is working satisfactorily, according to Mooney.

Assurance from the government that loans will be redeemed promptly removes the most serious obstacle and the posts of the American Legion are in a position to remove the remaining obstacles by co-operation with the banks.

No Scent of Graft

A widely known business man in Indianapolis had received his dinner check. As is his custom, he started to go over it to make sure there were no mistakes, explaining to the waiter that he always did this.

"On, that's all right, sir! That's all right. I always like to have my customers atomize their bills!" was the waiter's reply.

Early Electric Droplights

The first electric droplight, made in 1881 by Thomas A. Edison, was hung from the ceiling by a two-inch piece of webbing that looked for all the world like a piece of suspender webbing. Within the flat tube of textile ran the two wires feeding the lamp.

REASON WHY

Most Women Will Not Tell Their Real Age.

A possible explanation of woman's reluctance to tell her real age is offered by Thyra Samter Winslow in an article in this week's Liberty. "A lot of women have deceived their husbands about their real age," she writes. "It doesn't seem possible to the male population, but the supposedly gentler sex will know that I am right—though that may be one of the things they are not admitting to their own particular men, for reasons of their own. In fact, the same little wife who looks up into her husband's eyes and coos, 'Darling, I don't see how a wife can live with a man and not have him know her real age,' may be rather glad that her own husband believes her to be the age she says she is and doesn't do any real investigating to find out the truth.

"I've known many a girl to be one age one year and a good five years younger the next, when Mr. Right came along," Mrs. Winslow explains. "No real intention to deceive, of course; but must you tell a man everything? Mothers and sisters and a girl friend are only too glad to enter into a conspiracy and to assist in the deception of making the girl seem younger—and happier; and who cares whether a man knows the real age of the girl he's marrying?"

LITA GRAY CHAPLIN DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 20.—(UP.)—Marking her second appearance since filing a sensational complaint for divorce, Lita Gray Chaplin was to take the witness stand here today and possibly place more troubles on the slender shoulders of her actor-husband.

In accordance with the order of the court that Chaplin pay $8,000 alimony at once, $4,000 of which is retroactive, Mrs. Chaplin will testify as to whether the comedian has met the alimony allowance fixed by Judge Walter Guerin.

Time limit on payment of the alimony expires at 2 o'clock this afternoon and William K. Young, one of Mrs. Chaplin's attorneys, announced that unless the alimony was paid he would demand the arrest of Chaplin on his return to the jurisdiction of California courts.

Over Union-HeraldSO MANY ALIASES,
FORGOT OWN NAMECrook Apparently Puzzled
for Some Time.

New York.—A criminal of many aliases was being interrogated by detectives. Most crooks are satisfied with one or two, but this particular crook found it convenient to have six or seven fictitious names ready to use. And on different occasions he "had traveled," as the police say, under each of his names. In one city he assumed the name of Jim Jones and in another the name of Tom Smith.

His captors were fairly familiar with his numerous aliases, and the mention of any one of them recalled the picture of a short, thick fellow with a long nose and a pair of small, fishy eyes. A detective had written the aliases on a piece of paper. After studying them a moment he turned to the prisoner and asked gruffly: "Which of these names is your right one?"

The crook examined the list intently and appeared puzzled. "Blest if I know," he replied with a smile. "You see," he added apologetically, "I've been traveling under these here names so long that I've clean forgot my right name. But it will come to me after a bit," and sure enough he soon recalled it. The name, however, was not among the aliases.

Would Like to Forget.

"I think this fellow," said a detective, "was just pretending he did not remember his name. Indeed, he would like to forget it if he could, because he has been tried and convicted under that name for more offenses than he can remember. He is, like most experienced crooks, a masquerader. All crooks are masqueraders, in a sense, and go through life wearing a mask."

"After being initiated into the criminal fraternity the crook resolves to cast aside his own name and take some other one. His main reason for doing this is quite obvious; he desires to conceal his identity as much as possible. Only a fool, he argues, would use his own name in criminal operations. What a sweet thing it would be for the cops if every criminal used his right name when he went adventuring! Likewise, he has other reasons for not traveling under his own name. Though he may have fallen from grace, he has qualms about using a family name that heretofore has not been dragged in the mud. He does not care for himself, but he does not want to bring disgrace on his father and mother, who are poor but respectable. Why drag them into his troubles?"

"He decides to take a name, and while he is a criminal that name will suffice for his purpose. If he is caught no one will associate John Doe with John Smith. He will be arrested as John Doe, tried as John Doe and, if convicted and sentenced, he will go to the pen as John Doe, and no great harm will be done to anyone except to himself."

Sure to Find Him Out.

"He does not pause to consider that no matter how artfully he may try to conceal his real identity, the police will find him out. They will investigate his past, and when they once begin such an investigation they will be pretty sure to dig up a lot of knowledge concerning himself and his antecedents."

"After being in the game a while the crook finds that having only one alias is insufficient. He discovers the name he has been using is becoming entirely too familiar—especially to his enemies, the cops. If you are a crook, it does not pay to advertise; accordingly, he assumes another name and lays aside the first alias until people begin to forget it. In time the second alias outlives its purpose and it becomes necessary to take a third name. And this explains why criminals frequently have several aliases."

"All of these aliases he finds useful. It may not be convenient to use the name of Jim Jones in New York, but the name may do very well in another city in which he is unknown. He would prefer, many times, not to have a name at all, but since everybody must follow the custom and have a name, he must have one. Therefore he carries in his head several aliases, any one of which he may assume at a moment's notice. These names mean a lot to him. Some of them recall pleasant memories; others recall scenes that he would much prefer to forget. He remembers what Shakespeare said about calling a rose by any other name and it would smell as sweet. Though he would like to believe this, he knows the cops have a long memory for names. No matter how frequently he changes his name, the cops seem to be able to discover him and drag him from obscurity."

Freak Chickens Subject of Study by Zoologist

Philadelphia.—Chickens with two wings and four legs and even with four wings and four legs, and a duckling equally strangely constituted, were studied by Dr. F. E. Childers, professor of zoology at West Virginia university, who described observations to the American Society of Zoology, meeting here.

The freakish external features of the birds were found to be coupled with odd internal structures. Four kidneys were found in some of the birds, double cloacae in all of them, and frequent variations in some of the digestive tubes. The gizzard, however, remained single, nor was there any evidence of duplicity in the heart or respiratory apparatus.

COUNTY PLAN WAS ADOPTED
IN FAIRFIELDY. M. C. A. Formed and Pro-

Churches and Schools.

After many months of preliminary work, Fairfield county completed the organization of a county Y. M. C. A. at a meeting held in Lancaster Monday evening, January 17, when the constitution of the county association was adopted and a board of directors of twenty-one members was elected.

On the County Y. M. C. A. plan, the work is conducted without a building, at least until such a time when sentiment in favor of a building in the community is sufficient to secure the necessary funds. It was pointed out by A. E. Roberts, head of the town and country department of the National Y. M. C. A. council, who was the principal speaker, that some of the finest work being done by the Y. M. C. A. today is in the smaller cities, towns and rural fields where there are no buildings, but where the program is carried on thru the churches and the schools of the various communities throughout the county. In Fairfield county eleven different communities are cooperating and each community has helped to raise a share of the budget for the coming year. The various communities which are participating and the members of the board representing each community are as follows:

Amanda, Clyde Barr; Baltimore, D. C. Roshon; Basil, Lewis Cook; Bremen, A. D. Hufferd and E. C. Reed; Millersport, Robert Hansberger; Pickerington, L. J. Brooke; Pleasantville, R. M. Eymann; Stoutsville, W. A. Meyers; Sugar Grove, L. A. Carpenter; Lancaster, A. B. Vlerehome, Wayne Spybey, Homer Danison, R. C. Smart and Dr. R. G. Reesman.

Two ministers are to be added to this committee upon their election by the County and Ministerial associations.

CONSTANTINOPLE
MAY CHANGE NAMECity by the Bosphorus Known by Many Titles.

Washington.—The suggestion has been made in Turkey that Constantinople be renamed for Kemal Pasha, president of the republic.

Constantinople has had many names at various times, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its Washington headquarters.

"Not for 400 years has Constantinople been Constantinople to the Turks. It is Stamboul to them. Some geographical title experts hold that Stamboul has been abbreviated by the Turks from Constantinople just as they abbreviated Thessalonica (Salonica) to Selanik. There are two other contentions. One is that Stamboul is a corruption of a phrase which the Turkish invaders heard the Greeks say, 'ees teen poleen,' literally 'to the city.' Another supposition is that 'islam,' meaning 'true believing,' and 'bul,' meaning 'copious,' have been welded together by the Turks into Stamboul, 'abounding in the true Moslem faith.'"

"Emperor Constantine, for whom Constantinople is named, did not himself give it that name. On May 11, 330 A. D., Constantine called together a mass meeting in the newly completed hippodrome. It was a ceremony of rejoicing. A new city had been built, destined to succeed Rome as capital of the Roman empire for 11 centuries. At the high point of the hippodrome pageant Constantine dedicated the city to Christianity and named it Nova Roma.

"It was the Greeks who called it Constantinoupolis and finally it became Constantinople. The patriarch of the Greek church still signs his title 'bishop of Constantinople, New Rome,' but Nova Roma was forgotten. So was the original name, Byzantium for King Byzas, a local ruler, who first built a town on the Golden Horn peninsula.

"Turks have had other affectionate names for Constantinople just as Americans call New York, Father Knickerbocker. Sometimes the Turks call it Oumoudunla, 'the Mother of the World,' and sometimes Islambol, 'the City of Islam.' Another name is Der el Saadet, 'the City of Felicity.' Arabs call it by a name which is significant, El Farruch, 'the Earth Divider.'"

Cleansing Mercury

The bureau of standards says that a simple way to remove dirt from mercury is to shake the mercury vigorously with some cane sugar, after which the metal is filtered off through a pinhole in the bottom of a paper cone. The whole operation may be repeated if necessary. Instead of filtering through a pinhole, the mercury may be squeezed through several thicknesses of cloth.

REDMEN WILL HOLD DISTRICT MEETING HERE

The Logan and Cornplanter Tribes Will be Here in Their Paint and Feathers.

The Improved Order of Redmen held a very enthusiastic meeting in their wigwam at Memorial hall Thursday sleep, there being about 60 members present, which speaks well of the progress of this order. The degree is full of pep and working fine, under their able captain, Brother L. E. Miller, P. G. S. This order is making extensive preparations for their district meeting, which will be held in their wigwam, February 3, when all three degrees will be exemplified.

The degree team from Logan tribe Chillicothe, is coming in all their paint and feathers, and also the degree team from Corn Planter tribe, Adelphe. From reports from the various tribes in the district, this promises to be one big meeting.

At the conclusion of the meeting the committee served corn and venison, which all Indians love to eat.

Ancient Church Organ

Frederick Miller, an expert on organ history, says that the oldest pipe organ in America is in an Episcopal church at Clyde, N. Y. It was built for Queen Anne of England and presented by her to Trinity church in New York, which eventually passed it along to the congregation in Clyde. It is a genuine antique, with only 110 pipes and no pedals.

ENFORCEMENT OF OUR LAWS VITAL SUBJECT

Meetings Will be Held in the U. B. Church--Noted Speakers to be Present.

Arrangements have been made for three mass meetings on Law Enforcement and a better citizenship to be held in the United Brethren church on Thursday and Friday, January 27 and 28. These meetings are designed to bring out all the facts respecting the law enforcement situation in this city, and thruout the country in general.

On Thursday evening, Col. Alfred L. Moudy, noted lecturer and lieutenant-colonel in U. S. army, will open a series at 7:30 p. m., Rev. E. A. Tovey presiding.

On Friday afternoon at 2:30 and again on Friday evening at 7:30 p. m. two speakers of national renown and close students of constitutional government will deliver addresses. Hon. Oliver W. Stewart, president of the Flying Squadron Foundation, will speak in the afternoon and Miss Norma C. Brown, vice president, will appear in the evening. Rev. Emil S. Toensemeier will preside at the meeting on Friday afternoon and Rev. Franklin McElfresh will preside in the evening.

The platform of the Flying Squadron Foundation has been stated as follows: Ours is a government of the people. The Eighteenth Amendment is their verdict against the liquor traffic. Political parties and leaders are entrusted with its enforcement. The Flying Squadron demands that they discharge that obligation.

These meetings are free and open to the public and everybody is invited to attend.

AMUSEMENTS

Is it up to the American women who patronize motion pictures to say whether Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer chose wisely when they selected Col. Tim McCoy to star in the western dramas which that organization is producing for the American public. "War Paint," coming shortly to the Met theater, celebrates his first screen appearance.

A male star may be cordially disliked by all the men in the country yet be a great film success, but let the women picture-goers take a dislike to any man on the screen and he might as well retire. Realizing this the picture producers of today, in their search for new screen faces, are looking for starring material that will please the women who make up the great majority of film fans.

When the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio decided to make western dramas, along with their other types of pictures, the officials of that organization went outside of the screen colony in the search for a western star.

The Youngest Colonel

Col. Tim McCoy, Wyoming rancher, son of a retired army officer and himself the youngest colonel in the regular army was chosen as the new western star. McCoy with difficulty was persuaded to leave his big ranch holdings in the west to appear before the camera but at last signed a film contract and his initial screen appearance is in "War Paint."

McCoy is in his early thirties, tall, fair and blue eyed. He has a remarkable physique and clearly shows his Irish strain of blood. He is a first-class athlete, a horseman of great ability and is said to possess a remarkable screen personality. His acting is of a very natural sort and he goes thru it rather like he was actually experiencing the part than mimicking before a motion picture camera.

Pauline Starke appears as his leading woman and the cast also contains Karl Dane, famous "Slim" of "The Big Parade."

If a woman is homely she tries to persuade herself that she has a classical face.

PROHIBITION

Chemists Can Find No Substitute For Alcohol.

Washington, Jan. 20.—(U.P.)—Prohibition chemists have virtually decided that there is no substitute for wood alcohol as a denaturant for industrial alcohol. Substitutes tested recently have shown they can be distilled out of the denatured alcohol, leaving grain alcohol for bootleg trade, it was stated at the treasury today.

"Analytical chemistry has advanced to where chemists can take apart what they construct," one chemist told the United Press. "Organized bootleggers employ skilled chemists to purify denatured alcohol.

"Wood alcohol is the hardest denaturant to remove from grain alcohol because it is distilled at practically the same temperature as its cousin."

Not Well Informed

An attorney visited Mount Vernon, the home of Washington. In making a tour of the grounds he came to the old tomb.

Presently he came to his wife, who was not far away, and asked: "Who was Mike Egan?" His wife, who was not acquainted with "Mike," inquired why he wanted to know.

He took her to the old tomb and there she read the inscription: "Restored by Michigan."

The word is divided on the inscription plate, and the attorney had failed to recognize the name of our sister state.

A NEW NOTE MARKS THE FALL COAT

The very first of the fall sports, perhaps even the tennis and golf finales of late summer, will surely see the return of the long coat for certainly nothing else is so practical, so comfortable and so all-around wearable for every sort of informal occasion. But new notes give the latest of these fall coats a touch of individuality marking them a season apart from all that has gone before.

In the coat here shown, for instance, wide velvet reverses extending to the hemline are the masterly touch of a strictly tailored ensemble matching in color one of the new golden tan shades, chosen for the soft, closely woven cloth of gown and coat.

The pleated skirt gives the two-piece effect, for which womanhood has found such a liking recently.

Just the right effect is gained by topping this costume by a small self-toned hat, with jaunty tilt to its crown; for 'tis plain to be seen the hat is another indispensable part of the ensemble.

Thinking up "something different" for dinner every day while keeping within the bounds of her food budget, taxes the ingenuity of the housewife. Here is a menu, serving four people and costing only $1.00, which should be a welcome help, especially in the busy holiday season:—

Beef Bouillon
Hot Salmon Loaf
Cut String Bean Salad
Pineapple Betty
Creamed Peas
Bread and Butter
Coffee

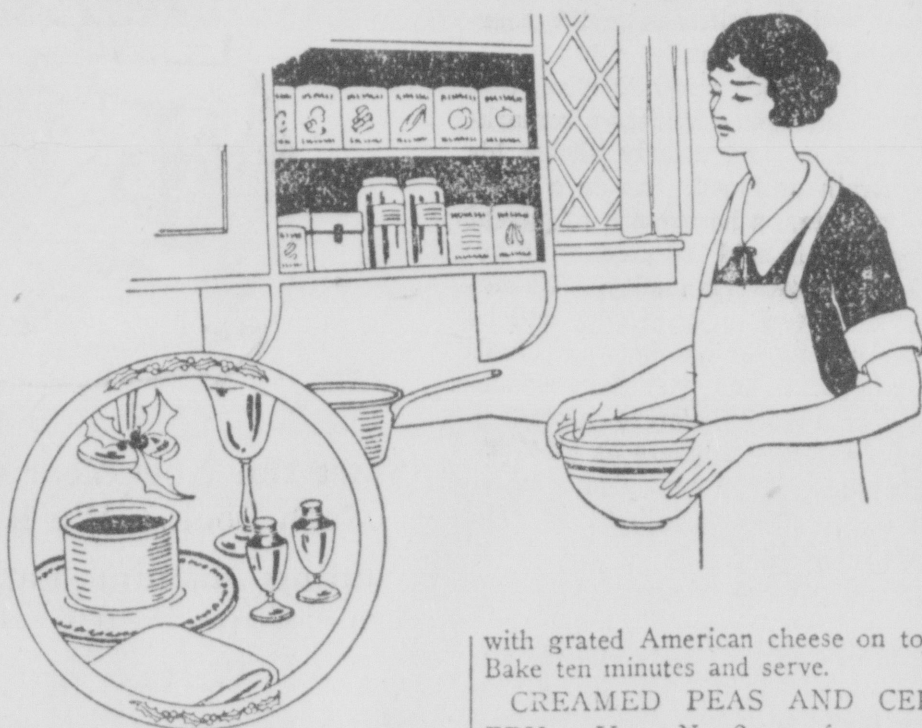

A CAN of beef bouillon costs 10 cents. A brand of salmon suitable for cooking costs 17 cents. After removing skin and bones, flake the fish, mix with white sauce and sufficient breadcrumbs to mould into loaf, moistening with 1 beaten egg. Bake until brown. The creamed peas will serve as a sauce. A can of peas may be had for 13 cents.

A can of cut string beans for the salad costs 13 cents. Serve with French dressing. A loaf of bread costs 10 cents. Enough coffee for four people, at an average cost of 40 cents a pound, costs about 4 cents.

A No. 2 can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple, for Pineapple Betty, costs 19 cents. Mix 1 1/4 cups of pineapple, drained, with 1 cup soft breadcrumbs, 3 tablespoons brown sugar and 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon. Put in greased baking-dish and pour over it 1/2 cup of the syrup drained from the pineapple. Dot top with butter. Bake in moderate oven and serve hot with a thin sauce made of remaining syrup, a little sugar, butter and hot water.

Use left-over bread for pudding and salmon loaf. Total cost of main ingredients is about 86 cents, leaving 14 cents to cover cost of butter and sugar for the meal and minor ingredients.

Peas In New Dishes

BECAUSE of the great popularity of peas, their delicious flavor and nutritive qualities, the housewife always welcomes new recipes and hints for their preparation. Peas are at her command the year round, since she can buy them canned at any time and since she finds in canned peas a quickly prepared, economical and tasty dish to serve her family. Here are suggestions for cooking peas in combination with other foods.

PEAS AND POTATOES SCALLOPED—Mash six boiled white potatoes and drain the water from a No. 2 1/2 can of peas. Mix, adding three tablespoons of melted butter and sufficient milk to make the mixture creamy. Put in a baking dish with grated American cheese on top. Bake ten minutes and serve.

CREAMED PEAS AND CELERY—Use a No. 2 can of peas and celery. Make a white sauce well flavored with salt and pepper and a dash of paprika. Add peas and celery from which water has been drained and simmer for ten minutes.

PEAS AND MUSHROOMS SAUTED—Drain a No. 2 can each of peas and mushrooms and dry the mushrooms on a towel. In a frying pan heat bacon fat or shortening with a chopped onion or green pepper. Add peas and mushrooms, saute for ten minutes and drain off fat. Add salt and pepper.

PEAS AND EGG EN COCOTTE For luncheon, heat a can of peas seasoned until most of the liquid is cooked off. Turn into ramekins. In the center of each place a whole egg.

WHY, EVA!

Noted Actress Eva Tanguay Will Wed Second Time.

New York, Jan. 20.—Eva Tanguay, famous vaudeville actress, who used to prance back and forth on the stage singing "I don't care, I don't care," does care now—and lots. She cares so much that she's going to be married. And her husband is a handsome youth, 25 years old—Allan Parado, Hungarian pianist and Eva's accompanist.

Eva's age is a secret. Along Broadway they say she is 40, but she said today that she's not telling.

"I don't care—I love Allan, and we're going to be married," she said. "That's definite."

The date of the marriage is a secret, too.

This will be Eva's second marriage. Ten years ago she married John Ford, dancer in vaudeville, but divorced him. It will be Parado's first marriage.

According to "Who's Who," Miss Tanguay is 49 years old.

Authorities offer somewhat as to when the refrigerator car was first used, but it is generally believed that it was first operated in 1867 between Chicago and New York city.

GRAND JURY

Indicts Woman For Murder In First Degree.

Columbus, Jan. 21.—One of the few women ever to be indicted for first degree murder in Franklin county, was charged by the January grand jury that reported to Judge Charles M. Rogers, Thursday morning.

The woman, Rosa Friend, colored, formerly of 230 North Cleveland avenue, is charged with killing her husband, James Friend, following a quarrel in front of a filling station at 228 Cleveland avenue, October 25. She was bound over to the jury on a manslaughter charge but the jury increased the penalty of the indictment.

When the police arrested her, Mrs. Friend was found calmly smoking a cigaret and she advised them that they had arrived almost before the smoke was out of her gun.

ARCTIC RODEOS ATTRACT MANY

Uncle Sam Conducts Reindeer Shows in Alaska—Sport Exciting.

Nome, Alaska.—Weeks after the state fairs are history the annual arctic rodeos, or great reindeer expositions, become big events at Kobuk, White Mountain, Noorvik, Akiaak and Shaktolik, within a day's drive of Nome and St. Michael.

These reindeer rodeos, which for picturesque, skill of exhibition and popularity equal the roundups of the western cowboy country, often draw 10,000 natives with many white miners and trappers.

Not a horse, steer, saddle or gun enters in the unique program, yet races, contests and prize-winning entries encourage much spirited competition.

The arctic fairs are staged under the auspices of the United States bureau of education for the natives of northwestern Alaska to advance, primarily the reindeer industry. The rodeos, usually held in January, February and March, add unlimited stimulus to the reindeer business and develop keen interest among Eskimo herders and herd owners.

Contests Held.

Prizes are awarded in contests, as racing, roping, herding, driving, creation and perfection of equipment. All affairs pertaining to reindeer are discussed and government representatives advise on marketing and improving the breed of stock.

In the sports division of these shows interest is encouraged in racing. Awards are made for short and long distance races, speed and efficiency in slaughtering, handling of tandem teams and sleds, breaking to harness wild deer, snowshoe running while driving reindeer, building of sleds and harness. New ideas are examined with a view to passing the good things on to neighbors.

A huge circus tent pitched on the level frozen surface of a river serves as sleeping quarters for visiting reindeer barons and to house the exhibits. The spread of canvas is in itself a big attraction to the Eskimos, who liken it to a mammoth igloo of the happy hunting land. They come each year, and every season are just as much awed by the swinging stretches of cloth and the scores of glittering electric lights.

Last year the first prize in sled construction was one with no bolts in joints or mortises, each being wrapped with whalebone instead of rawhide or sinew. The sled weighed 50 pounds, with a capacity strength of half a ton. The long-distance contest is a ten-mile round trip. The deer start away like bullets, last season's record being 37 minutes in a field of 24 entries.

Reindeer's Drawing Power.

One sled reindeer made a pulling test by drawing on level snow a sledge laden with 2,300 pounds of sacked sand.

In voting for prize winners of harness, sleds or reindeer products the ten judges stand with their backs to the exhibits. They turn slowly around one by one, each pointing at their particular choice while a government official records it.

A peculiar rule in racing requires that the driver must bring his reindeer in to the starting point. If the animals balk at pulling the sled and driver, then the driver in turn hauls in the shackled animal. Contestants striving against such odds create an immense amount of comedy that adds as much fame to the luckless one as is accorded great American movie stars.

Other stunts of great interest to these industrious Eskimos is, tying cargo onto a sled, new ways of attaching harness to the animals and trick manners of hitching tandem.

The principal products of the industry are reindeer robes, leather goods, calfskins for coat linings, moccasins, reindeer meat, milk and cheese, tallow and sausage, hot dogs and pemmican, and various articles carved from antlers and fresh bones.

Since the herding of deer has been popularized the Alaska natives of the tundra are wealthy and surrounded with comforts. Many are gradually assuming civilized methods of living, using wooden and stone houses with electric lights, eating much the same food as the white population at the coast towns.

Hurls Canned Goods; Bandit Is Driven Out

Omaha, Neb.—A barrage of canned goods and glass bottled pickles which greeted a youthful and somewhat nervous bandit who tried to hold up the manager and two clerks in a local grocery, proved more effectual than the youth's gunfire and the bandit retreated empty handed. Arthur Rubin, the proprietor, was first to hurl cans at the man when he ordered "stick up your hands." The bandit fired once at Rubin, when one of the clerks began throwing bottled goods at him. The bandit fired five shots at his second attacker, all of which went wide, and fled. The man escaped but the day's receipts were saved.

360-Pound Snake Caught After More Than a Year

Rio de Janeiro.—A giant "Sucuri" snake, member of the boa family, more than 30 feet in length and weighing 360 pounds, was recently captured in the state of Matto Grosso and brought to the Rio de Janeiro zoological garden by Ignacio Augusto Nascimento, who led a party that pursued the snake for more than a year. Nascimento set out to capture the largest snake ever seen here, and succeeded. Twelve men were needed to handle the boa when it arrived at the zoo.

Governmental Basis

You cannot possibly have a broader basis for any government than that which includes all the people, with all their rights in their hands, and with an equal power to maintain their rights.—William Lloyd Garrison.

Gave Name to Region

The land of cinnamon was the name given by the Spanish conquerors of Peru to a region east of the Andes in the forests on the plains of the Napo, where they found the aromatic bark.

De Laval Oil

Don't experiment with various kinds of oil to lubricate your De Laval Separator. There is just one brand of oil which is exactly suited to the purpose, and hundreds of brands which will not do at all.

Keep the oil cup of your separator filled with De Laval oil and you will get the utmost in separator satisfaction. The machine will turn easier, and give longer and better service.

All light, high-speed machines run better when lubricated with De Laval oil. It gives them the protection they need and is, therefore, the cheapest oil in the end.

Sold in half-gallon and one gallon sealed cans, with a handy spout.

The Choice

We do not know what way will lead to happiness either for ourselves or for our friends. We cannot see the outcome of any earthly choice, but we know that in the end right always pays better than wrong, and that even here and now good deeds bring more comfort than any evil deeds could bring us.

It Was One Girl's Way

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

JOHN CLIFFORD looked up from his office desk and nodded to a tall, straight, lithe youth in a neat livery.

"You wanted to see me?" asked Clifford.

"Yes, sir. You advertised for a chauffeur."

"I want some one who is trustworthy to drive my mother about the country—no speed-frenzied, understand? She is something of an invalid."

"Mr. Drury told me that, sir. He called my attention to the advertisement."

"Paul Drury? You come on his recommendation?"

The youth whipped out a letter from his coat pocket and handed it across the desk. "From Mr. Drury, sir."

Clifford read the letter thoughtfully, while the chauffeur watched the keen dark face with its crown of graying hair.

"Well, young man, I am going to take you on Mr. Drury's strong recommendation—he says he has known your people. So your name is Joy—Isn't it?" His brows lifted as the chauffeur reddened with embarrassment. "What is your Christian name?"

"Patsy—Patsy Joy is my name," he stammered.

"We will call you Pat, then. Now, Pat, my car is around at a neighborhood garage and you may come around with me and then you can drive me down to Woodland and I will show you about."

"Yes, sir."

"The pay will be two hundred a month—I am paying for my mother's safety, Pat."

Mrs. Clifford fell in love with the ways of her new chauffeur at once. "He is so thoughtful, and tender, and yet keeps his place, John."

"I am glad you feel safe with him, mother. He seems a dependable youth."

"Why, the other day we overtook a car carrying a child who had been in a motor accident. They were looking frantically for a doctor. In an instant Pat pulled the emergency kit from under his seat and went over and dressed the wound as skillfully as a nurse or doctor. The woman telephoned to me afterward and said his quick action had saved the child's life. I was proud of Patsy, Clifford."

"He saw ambulance service in France, Drury tells me. Patsy has a brother dying from war wounds—and the kid's worried about him—all his money goes for that."

Patsy Joy occupied the room over the smaller garage, which was close to the garage, and kept very much to himself, although the large staff of servants at Woodland liked and respected him. One night the telephone bell in Patsy's room rang sharply, and five minutes later, he appeared white-faced and desperate at Clifford's study door.

"Excuse me, Mr. Clifford, but my brother is dying and they've sent for me—the last train's gone—can I borrow the small car to get into town, sir?" The head was lifted high, but the dark eyes were full of unshed tears.

"I will drive you down myself, Pat," said Clifford quickly.

"Thank you, sir."

They reached the hospital in time for Patsy Joy to talk with his dying brother, but one or two incidents caused his employer to think deeply as he returned home through the dark night. As Patsy had leaped from the car, with broken thanks to Clifford, a doctor had come forward hurriedly.

"You are in time, Miss Patricia—he will last the night through."

And Patsy, crying like a girl, had said in a girl's broken voice: "Oh, I shall be so alone now—I cannot let him go!"

John Clifford did not go to bed at all that night. His thoughts were too busy. The next day he had a long conference with his friend, Paul Drury.

"There were just those two," said the later gravely. "She was untrained for work that would bring in much money, but she could drive a car with the best of them—and she had to have money to make Roddy's last days easier. They two are the last of a fine old family, out of luck all through. I allowed Patricia to go to you because the work was to be with your mother—and I knew you. I'll have to find something for her now in a different line."

"She can come as mother's companion—and can drive her just the same."

"I will try her on that. She is a sensitive little thing and did hate the uniform!"

Drury and Clifford attended the lonely funeral services and the military burial. Clifford envied his friend, who had a right to accompany Patricia through the whole thing, but at last poor Roddy was laid to rest in his soldier's grave, heaped with flowers sent down from Woodland, and then there came the interview about Patricia's return to Mrs. Clifford. At last it was arranged, and under her true name of Patricia Joy Laidlaw the girl went back to Woodland.

A year later Paul Drury confided to John Clifford, who was looking younger and happier than he had for years, "I tell you, John, if I were not a married man I'd certainly fall for Patsy!" Clifford laughed triumphantly. "Well, I'm free as air—and I've asked her and she has said 'Yes.'"

REMARKABLE PICTURE WILL BE PRESENTED

"America Under Fire" Will be Shown at Grand Opera House Three Nights.

Corporal Bob Ingleston, who comes to Circleville for three days, starting Tuesday, January 25, under the auspices of the American Legion with his remarkable picture "America Under Fire" has been before the public eye for a great many years, both as a lecturer and a story teller of strange lands and peculiar people which it has been his pleasure to come in contact with in his various trips of exploration in unknown quarters of the globe. Corporal Ingleston first came into the public eye when as assistant photographer for the Smithsonian institute at Washington, he accompanied the Bender Brothers on their first trip of exploration into the Arctic circle, remaining there for a period of three years enduring privations which were more common at that time than now, making a pictorial record of the life and habits of the Esquimos and the animal life of that little known country, returning to America and giving to the world the first pictures of the land of perpetual ice and snow.

His next trip took him into the jungles of central and south America, penetrating far into the interior where few white men's feet had ever trod, there studying and making a pictorial record of the animal and plant life of the fever infested jungles. But unable to stand the strain, he was forced to return to America where he was appointed the official photographer of the state of California, and today as you gaze upon the glories and wonders of that great state, you are looking upon scenes that were made thru the eye of the camera by Corporal Ingleston.

When the break with Germany came in 1917, the corporal gave up all his connections, his wonderful prospects that would have assuredly been his and threw in his lot as a common Doughboy and followed Old Glory across the sea, and today the Historical society and the United States Signal corps give to Corporal Ingleston the credit for a major portion of the front line scenes taken in the battle zone at Champagne, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel and the Argonne, and these pictures will be shown accompanied by a humorous lecture in the language of the Doughboy at the Grand theater for the first time in Circleville. Should you have had a father, brother son, husband or sweetheart over there you may see him in actual combat against the common enemy, and as a great many local boys were connected with the 166th Ohio Infantry, you will probably see some on whom you know. America Under Fire is being shown under the auspices of the local Post of the American Legion and the boys are very anxious that every man, woman and child in Pickaway county, see this greatest of all pictures ever filmed.

YANKS CONSUME HUGE QUANTITY OF MILK DAILY.

Americans drink twenty-eight quarts more of milk per capita than they did in 1914. Average for drinking purposes of urban dwellers is a pint of milk per capita per day. Thirty million head of dairy cattle on 4,500,000 farms supply the country's wants.

In the cities, the cow's personal representative is the evaporated milk can which simply contains fresh cow's milk sterilized in the container and with 60 per cent of the water removed. "Tin can herds" are conveniently stabled by the housewife on the pantry shelf. Milking is done with a can opener.

Altho the United States is one of the greatest wheat producing countries the value of the entire wheat crop is but one-third that of the dairy products. All of the cotton produced in the country is worth barely half as much as the output of our cows.

Adding the total value of the potato, oats, and tobacco crops they will total but a small amount more than the value of milk and milk products.

Ethiopia

The ancients vaguely called everything south of Egypt "Ethiopia" (the land of the dark races, or swarthy faced). It probably extended from about the twenty-fourth to the tenth degree of north latitude, while its limits to the east and west were doubtful.

Habits of Foxes

The biological survey says that foxes, when in the wild state, were considered monogamous. However, when bred in captivity they are, in general, found to be polygamous.
